ANOTHER GIRL HANGS HERSELF IN DEATH TOWN

Internet cult linked to 14th suicide in a year

By Tony Bonnici and Sara Dixon

PRETTY teenager has become the 14th youngster in one year to hang herself in a town dubbed the suicide capital of Britain.

Angie Fuller, 18, was found by her fiance hanging from a banister at their home in Bridgend, South Wales.

There were renewed fears last night of an internet death cult in the town after it emerged that Miss Fuller had visited a social networking website just hours before she died.

The teenager, the second girl to die in the spate of suicides, was a member of Bebo and Facebook. Many of the previous victims had posted profiles on such sites.

She lived with fiance Joel Williams, 21, a few streets away from Andrew O'Neill, 19, who was found hanged in September. Detectives are re-examining many of the suicides and a task force has been set up to tackle the problem.

Last night the head of the Suicide Prevention Strategy in South Wales predicted there would be more deaths. "It is almost impossible to stop individuals from committing suicide," said Dr Tegwyn Williams.

On her recently updated Facebook profile, Miss Fuller wrote: "I don't like myself, but hey who does? I'm an angry drunk, I hate religion, I love my boyfriend and I had all my hair cut short and dyed purple yesterday!"

She and Mr Williams had lived together for five months in a three-bedroom terrace home in the Nantymoel village area of Bridgend. The night she died the couple had thrown a party
